Greyhounds capable of living as happy, safe pets should be given the opportunity to do so, and should only be placed in homes where it is believed they will be appropriately cared for. Prior to rehoming the greyhound you must be comfortable that the new owner is capable and willing to provide the greyhound with appropriate care. This includes being satisfied that the new owner:

- will comply with all relevant legislation including, within NSW, the Companion Animals Act 1998, local government regulations and the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Act 1979
- lives in a residence that permits the keeping of dogs
- will meet the physical, behavioural and social needs of the greyhound
- has time everyday to positively interact with the greyhound and provide daily exercise
- has the means to seek veterinary care as required
- is prepared to educate themselves on greyhound care and ownership

You must also be confident that the greyhound is of adequate physical and mental health to be a happy and safe pet. You should disclose any behavioural or health problems to the new owner prior to rehoming so they can be prepared to manage these accordingly.

It is preferable to have your greyhound neutered when it becomes a pet. You should discuss with your veterinarian how to organise this.

4. REQUEST TO EUTHANASE THE GREYHOUND

The decision to euthanase a greyhound should have regard to whether it is in the best interests of the greyhound in the particular circumstances. You should explore all options as to whether the greyhound can be retained or rehomed as a pet. This decision should be assessed in light of whether the greyhound has a suitable temperament to be comfortable and relaxed as a companion animal and is safe around people and other pets.

To seek advice on the suitability of your greyhound for rehoming you can contact Greyhounds As Pets on (02) 8767 0534. You can also seek advice from your veterinarian.

There are circumstances where humane euthanasia of a greyhound may be necessary to prevent continued and future suffering. Risks to greyhound welfare include:

- undiagnosed, unmanaged or persistent medical or behavioural disorders which cause pain or distress;
- frustration and poor quality of life due to long term kenneling because of a lack of suitable rehoming options;
- repeated rehoming due to adoption failure;
- failure to establish an owner-pet bond as a result of difficult or unsafe behaviours such as profound anxiety, human directed aggression and predatory aggression.

If a decision is made to euthanase the greyhound it must be undertaken humanely and by a registered veterinarian. Veterinarians should continue to exercise their professional judgment to act in the best interests of the animals in their care.
